Few cancers are as easily preventable as colon cancer. Colon cancer is the number two cause of cancer deaths in America. Colon cancer has a greater than 90% treatable rate when detected early. Only 1 in 3 colon cancers are currently being diagnosed at this early treatable stage. Kentucky ranks among one of the worst in the United States for applying known standards for colon cancer prevention. The Colon Cancer Prevention Project wants to forever change this trend and promote prevention and early detection to save lives and reduce unnecessary suffering.
